

Suza liked to take life slowly. Well, he didn't really have a choice - he was a sloth. The other animals sometimes teased him for being so slow, but this never bothered him. He enjoyed his life among the trees of the Amazon Rainforest and spent his time doing the things he loved best; sleeping, eating and simply hanging around!

One day, in the middle of one of his long snoozes, Suka was awakened by a noise that he'd never heard before. The sound was in the distance but it was still piercing enough to fill the air around him. Suka turned his head towards the forest floor. It was alive with activity - whole families of animals on the run. He listened carefully. Through the fright and confusion he was sure he heard something about 'giant monsters eating the trees'...
